Worker mobilizes troop operations

by Donna Brown
Hilltop Times staff writer

When the troops move out, this mobility officer moves in.

Whether it's war or peacetime deployment, Brad Luke is responsible for making sure maneuvers run smoothly.

Each year Mr. Luke and the other workers in the 2849th Air Base Group Mobility Office process more than 5,000 military people and 12 million pounds of cargo off base during exercises and actual missions.

Mr. Luke compares the mobility office to a commercial airport terminal. "We're the folks on the other end of the counter," he said.

When troops line up for deployment, Mr. Luke's tests his organizational skills and his skills in keeping waters smooth between organizations.

"This one is a job that you can plan and execute," he said. "Maybe it's just a personality thing, but I need to know whether what I'm doing is working. Here, we know right then and there whether what we're doing is going to work."

A gleam appears in Mr. Luke's eyes when he talks about the mission and improvements he's made by computerizing the deployment process. His work is his hobby—he said he loves to write computer programs.

Ask him for any statistic relating to his mission and he'll spread a stack of computer-generated reports before you in a fan and point to the requested information.

Mr. Luke served in the Air Force for 21 years before he retired in 1984. He began working for the mobility office in 1985 as a civilian warrior.

Head 'em up, move 'em out

Brad Luke, a mobility officer for the 2849th Air Base Group, keeps deployment operations running smoothly from the mobility control center.
